

ABSTRACT

The present invention can provide an electric resistance type detecting sensor which is characterized in that a pair of electrodes is provided oppositely to each other on the surface of an electrically insulated substrate, and a film of electroconductive fine particles modified with a probe is formed on and/or between the electrodes.